

soldier 1: Oh, yeah, and an ear on his foot. Listen, we are soldiers, but not Soldier boy.

soldier 2: Just like my partner here is a genius. Tell me another one.

Villager: I'm serious here, and who the hell is Soldier boy? Have you ever read any novels or comics?

(One of the soldiers laughed (not laughing out loud) when the villager was speaking.)

Villager: Why are you laughing? You think I'm stupid? (Looking at him)

Soldier 1: My wife just has a baby. Only a psychopath would not believe you. (The key here is to come up with something which is obviously defined by a good thing, like having a baby and getting married. That also can make the villagers think it's not true and they are contemptuous)

Villager: I'm not joking around with you guys. If you believe me, will your baby die from this?

Soldier 2: Just like what we mentioned, we are professionals here, we are so trained that we won't laugh no matter how crazy this is unless we can't hold it. (Two soldiers both laughing and trying to hold) How about that sir, you go home and wait for us to do some research, we will let you know when we find something. By the way I will send a psychologist with them (information).

Villager: Send some soldiers, do something. It's really dangerous, bring soldiers as much as you can, do it as soon as possible.

VILLAGER runs off in disgust. Soldiers start laughing.

The villager heard laughter and came back.

Two soldiers (looking at him and stop laughing): Anything else?

The villagers ran away again. Soldiers start laughing.

The villager heard laughter and asked the audience: "Are they laughing?"

The villager came back and the soldiers looked at him: Sir?